"It was in Paris that I realized what my problem was, I was ashamed of being a Negro. I finally realized that I would remain what I was to the end of my time and lost my shame. I awoke from my nightmare."

Mr. Baldwin's release from the nightmare that hounded him from America was abrupt. One evening he took a Norwegian girl to a party given by white American writers. The writers ridiculed Mr. Baldwin's story, and he fiew into a rage.

Leaving the party, the Nor-wegian girl asked Mr. Bald-win why he had lost his head.

The fears of his mother nuthor, unable to contain his hatred of white American civilization, took the road of exile to Paris and for nine years lived an impoverished existence with African students. His tortured life was only occasionally relieved by the friendship of Americans and Europeans who helped him.

Friend of Richard Wright

In Paris Mr. Baldwin came know the late Richard Wright, the well-known Negro writer who had abandoned America. Mr. Wright briefly was Mr. Baldwin's only literary mentor, but the friend-ship foundered on angry recriminations and ended in bitterness.

Although he had been released from his nightmare of hatred for whites, Mr. Baldwin was still embittered when he decided to return to the United States in 1957. He returned, he said, because he did not wish to follow the exam-ple of Richard Wright, who

CONFIDENTIAL

On May 29, 1963, a confidential source, who has furnished reliable information in the past, advised that a rally sponsored by the Staten Island group of Congress of Racial Equality (CORE), was held at Wagner College, Grimes Hill, Staten Island, New York, at 8:00 PM, on Tuesday, May 28, 1963. Admission was $1.00 and a collection was taken up during the rally. A total of $1400.00 was collected. Between 850 to 900 people attended.

The guest speaker was James Baldwin, a Negro writer; and folk singer, Leon Bibh provided entertainment. The affair lasted about three bours. U

Proceeds from the sale of tickets was to be given to CORE in Birmingham for help in paying attorneys' fees, and aiding the integration movement.

Baldwin spoke for about 20 minutes and said he was speaking as an individual Negro rather than as a spokesman for the Negro. Baldwin gave a brief outline of his boyhood in the South. The theme of his talk was that integration in the South is the white man's problem and not the Negro's. He said it was not a southern problem, but a national problem. He was not interested in compromises for the Negro, stating compromising was a way of evading responsibility. 4 106-1465

On June 4, 1963, Staten Island Chapter of C.O.R.E. held a forum at the community center at the Markham Homes in West New Brighton, S.I. The purpose of the forum was to discuss JAMES BALDWINS speech of 5/28/63. A number of people had been offended by BALDWIN's remarks, so C.O.R.E. set up a panel of speakers, pro and con to debate "Baldwinism". EDITH OVERTON was chairlady, and on the panel were BESS WEINBERG, NORMA OWENS, HERBERT HINES, RICHARD PRIDEAUX and JOAN PRIDEAUX. Amongst those in the audience which numbered about 40, were and others. There was a thorough discussion of "Baldwinsim" and its' relationship to Negro attitudes. The discussion lasted from 8:15 P.M. until after 10:00 P.M. when refreshments were served and there were informal discussions. Meeting broke up at 11:00 or a little after.

Take Legal Action Against
New Orleans Move

By HENBY RAYMONT
Three publishers here have retained attorieys to defend James Balawin's novel, "Another Country," against a threatened ban in New Orleans on the ground of obscemity.

Criminal charges against a threatened ban in New Orleans on the ground of obscemity.

Criminal charges against a threatened by Edward Pinner, New Orleans assistant city attorney, who has called it "the most filthy and pornographic book I have ever read."

Richard Baron, head of The Dial Press, publisher of the hard-cover edition of the novel, said yesterday he had retained Horace Manges, attorney for the American Book Publishers Council, to head the legal battle. The novel, widely praised by critics, is about unfulfilled and should be left to the individual should be left to the individual draw the novel.

Such pressure began, he said, shortly after Mr. Baldwin addressed a meeting of the Congress of Racial Equality at Tulane University in New Orleans.

It was the first time that an obscenity charge had been brought against the work of the 40-year-old writer, Mr. Baron asserted.

On May 28, 1963 Staten Island Chapter of C.O.R.E. held a "Back Birmingham" rally at the Wagner College Gymnasium on S.I. JAMES BALDWIN, the author, and LEON BIBB, the singer, were featured on the program. EDITH OVERTON, president of the C.O.R.E. chapter, made the introductory remarks. CLARENCE OVERTON was master of ceremonies. Other C.O.R.E. members who

There were about

1500 people in attendance.

The program began at about 8:40 P.M. and lasted until about 11:00 P.M. The entertainment came first, followed by a brief talk by Rev. EPPS of St. Phillips Baptist Church. J. BALDWIN followed with a speech of about 40 minutes after which he answered questions from the audience. There was one questioner, however, who was very unusual. He was a white male, about 50-55 yrs. of agy 5'-6" - 150 lbs. graying hair, known to be an associate of M. AZZARI of the S.I. Chapter of the A.C.L.U. This man's question had to do with an alternative route to the attainment of civil rights for Negroes. He prefaced his question with a statement of his views on the relationship of this capatalistic society and our form of government. He gave the impression that he favored government control of heretofore private enterprise, this supposedly being the only realistic route to true liberty for the individual.

CORFIDENCE

On June 8, 1963, a combined social gathering and meeting was held by the Staten Island Community Peace Group at the home of in Staten Island. Present were:

Most of the people arrived by about 9:00 P.M. Some comedy records dealing humourously with the subjects of peace and disarmanent were played; also a tape recording (belongs to was played - it was taped from a broadcast over WBAI - F.M. in N.Y.C. - it was a skit done on "the Military and Peace". It traced the history of the Military leaders of the United States since the early part of the 20th Century and the relationship of these men to leaders of Congress, big business leaders and others. It was done in a humourous vein and depicted the supposed collusion that has existed between these groups of men. After the playing of the tape, refreshments were served, and then the future of the Peace Groups was discussed. (There had been an earlier discussion of the appearance of JAMES BALDWIN at a C.O.R.E. rally on 5/28/63. Some of those present had felt that BALDWIN was too bitter and extreme in his talk, but others notably were very firm in insisting that BALDWIN was not extreme and that no true liberal should have been offended.)

Some of those present felt that the Peace Group had been inactive for too long. They stressed the need for some public action by the Group soon, during the summer, possibly on "Hiroshima Day" August 6th. Others felt that that would be too soon to organize an effective rally or large-scale meeting. Who made many comments, and who had worked with a "Women's Strike for Peace Group in N.Y.C., was delegated to get a speaker through or from the "Women's Strike" group. The discussions lasted until after midnight.

> Communist Party, United States of America Re: Negro Cuestion Communist Influence in Racial Matters Internal Security - C

On August 1, 1963, a confidential source who was in a position to furnish reliable information advised that Clarence Benjamin Jones, David Lubell and James Baldwin a Negro author were flying to Birmingham, Alabama on Monday, at 11:30 AM, presumably August 5, 1963. This source stated these men would be leaving from La Guardia Airport, New York City, and that members from the American Guild of Variety Artist would be flying on the same plane. This source further stated that on August 1, 1903, Clarence Jones may mave attempted to contact A. D. King, Brother of Martin Luther King at Birmingham, Alabama.

Jones as the person whom he knew during late 1953 or early 1954, to be a member of and in a position of leadership in the Labor Youth League (LYL).

The LYL has been designated pursuant to Executive Order 10450.

David Lubell

In testimony before the House Committee on Un-American Activities at Boston, Massachusetts, on March 18,19,20, 1958,
Armando Penha, a former member of the Communist Party, identified David Lubell as a Communist Organizer among the students at various institutions of figher education in the Boston area. Penha also identified David Lubell as a Harvard student who was an Organizer for the Communist Party at the same time. This information is pertinent to the period 1952.

church ssemblage. 'We in particular have an anterest in turning America into the free country it has glways claimed to be.'

Mr. Baldwin, who has lived in Paris on and off for over 10 years, returned recently from the United States. He is now at work on a play.

The Paris campaign came into existence after an informal meeting last night at a night-club run by Art Simmons, a jazz pianist.

'Those of us living here felt somewhat alienated from the struggle now going on in America, yet we wanted to show our sympathy and solidarity,' said William Marshall, an actor from New York who, with Mr. Baldwin, called the meeting.

The Rev. Martin Van Buren Sargent, pastor of The American Church, sent his wife to meet Mr. Marshall and Mr. Baldwin and to offer the church's meeting room to open the campaign.

Arrangements were made so quickly that most of the regular congregation knew nothing of Mr. Baldwin's presence until Dr. Sargent announced the campaign at the morning service.

Word of Mr. Baldwin's scheduled appearance spread through the American community last night and many people not members of the church but in the August vacation period most of the congregation are founded.

With Edward Cumberbatch

"If we—and now I mean the relatively conscious whites and the relatively conscious blacks, who must, like lovers, insist on, or create, the consciousness of the others—do not falter in our duty now, we may be able, handful that we are, to end the racial nightmare, and achieve our country, and change the history of the world."—James Baldwin.

With a river of change rushing past their doorsteps, there are indeed, even among the classmates of James Baldwin, only a handful who have been caught up in the flood, which is lapping at the sands of time and prejudice. Of the 35 boys who walked with him in 1938 past the wine- and urine-smelling hallways of Harlem on their way to Frederick Douglass JHS, only a few are actively engaged. Among them are Dr. George Simpson, spending his after-office hours mapping tactics for CORE and the NAACP in Miami; Randolph Douglas, sweating in the picket lines at the Harlem Hospital Annex: Arthur Moore, sitting hour after stifling hour addressing NAACP membership cards.

". . . the Negro himself no longer believes in the good indeed, he ever could have."

Dr. George Simpson insists that, classmate Baldwin to the contrary, he still believes in the good faith of some white Americans. Still, he has lost belief in large numbers of them. He lost faith in one group of them one night in November, 1955, in the all-Negro city of Mound Bayo, Miss. He was in the midst of a six-month residency in surgery in the town's only hospital when they brought in Gus Courts, the Negro voter registration leader, with three bullet holes in him.

Dr. Simpson extracted a shotgun slug from Courts, who survived, and offered it to an FBI agent as evidence. "'Hang it on your watch chain for a souvenir,' he told me. I asked him where he was from and he told me a town in northern Mississippi and I realized he was just another Mississippian, only with an FBI badge. It pretty much disillusioned me with the FB1."

Simpson's disillusion is limited, though. He and his wife, a pediatrician, probably have a family income higher than any other members of the JHS 139 class of '38, yet he works fiercely as a leader of the NAACP, of CORE, of a bi-racial city commission on human rights, to achieve "not only freedom of association, but absolute freedom of opportunity-you can't have one without the other."

Simpson's own opportunities were largely self-made. He grew up, his father a WPA laborer and his mother a sometime domestic, at 300 W. 147th St., and was president of a street gang called the Cobras. He went to Townsend Harris. HS when it was an elite prep school for City College with entrance by competitive examination, and won football and track letters at CCNY before graduating in 1946.

"You had to have a special kind of drive to realize that opportunities were open to Negroes if you wanted to push for them. Coming from my background, I never had this drive until about my junior year in college, when I decided I could be a doctor if I wanted." He went to the then all-Negro Meharme Medical College in Nashville, interned in St. Louis, vila angry because I cannot live in five years' residency in surgery at Meharry, interrupted by two years in the Army's "doctor draft" and began to practice five years ago.

Why does Simpson fight? "Because you can't get away from it." And, he says, "I'm an optimist, perhaps because, as Baldwin says, things look better when you're getting you're grits. It's easier for me because I'm a professional. I went to the Fort Lauderdale jail the other day and a deputy started to snarl, Where to you think . . .?' and then his eyes fell on my little black bag and he was all smiles and waved me in." Negroes who have succeeded in "fighting the man," he says, have an obligation to those who haven't. "I think there is more opportunity around than most Negroes know about, but Negroes have more discouragements, more roadblocks, than most white people know about, and that is wrong."

"... when the country speaks of a 'new' Negro, which it has been doing every hour on the hour for decades, it is not really referring to a change in the Negro, which, in any case, it is quite incapable of assessing, but only to a new difficulty in keeping him in his place, to the fact that it encounters him (again! again!) barring yet another door to its spiritual and social ease."

Randolph Douglas has barred more doors than Gov. George Wallace has stood in: he's picketed Woolworth's; he's picketed the Harlem Hospital Annex; he's picketed Harlem liquor stores which had no Negro salesmen, and this month he's going to join the civil rights demonstration in Washington with all the friends he can beg or bludgeon into accompanying him. He says he derives no satisfaction from it. "I am a very bitter young man. I am peace but instead I must fight for something that is mine."

The bitter wine of Harlem has puckered the mouths of both Douglas and his classmate, Baldwin: in JHS 139 both were considered goody-goodys by their classmates and Douglas, quiet and hard-working, was valedictorian of his class with a 90 average, three points better than Baldwin.

From 139, he went for one term to De Witt Clinton HS with Baldwin, then, when the Bronx HS of Science opened, became the first Negro to enter and graduate from that school. He entered City College in 1941, left for two years in the Army Medical Corps and upon his discharge, took a job as a medical technician at the Bronx VA Hospital which he kept while earning a bachelor of science from CCNY in 1947 and a master's from NYU in 1956. That year, he left the VA and began teaching in the city schools. He is now chairman of the science dept at JHS 44.

Harlem is a passion with Douglas and, as are other passions, is compounded of almost equal parts of love and hate. He once lived in Washington Heights but returned to Harlem to live in a $134-a-month unit (he makes about $8,000 a year) in the fashionable Lenox Terrace Apartments at 2186 Fifth Av., not too far from the tenement at 238 W. 140th St. from which he set out each morning for Douglass JHS.

"I remember the slums," he says, "And there have been some changes, but everything moves so slowly. Now the people are demanding direct action. They won't wait. They're beginning to feel their strength. And so I came back to Harlem to become rerooted with my people."

James Baldwin's Classmates Today

By GENE GROVE and ALFRED T. HENDRICKS
With Edward Cumberbatch

What happens to a dream deferred?
Does it dry up like a raisin in the sun?
Or fester like a sore—
And then run?

Does it stink like rotten meat? Or crust and sugar over like a syrupy sweet? Maybe it just sags like a heavy load.

O does it explode?

—Langston Hughes

Trothan—a short, chunky former classmate of author James Baldwin at Harlem's JHS 139

—keeps his dream in a closet of his neat-as-a-pin apartment in a Bronx housing project.

"Are you sure you have time?" he asks as shyly, almost apologetically, he loosens the cord that binds a flat, rectangular package he has hesitantly carried into the living room. A visitor assures him, of course, there is time.

there is time.

Then Trotman stoops and slowly unfolds the brown wrapping paper from the package. And then he hands a visitor a large, neady mounted photograph. It is a portrait study of a very attractive woman.

"One of the models at the School." Trotman says.

How long, wonders a visitor, have you been interested in photography?

"I guess I started fooling around with it when I was a kid at the Harlem Y," he answers. "But I never really took it too seriously. I mean, I didn't think I could make a career out of photography."

Yes, it is sometimes necessary to deprecate a dream deferred. * * *

FODAY, TROTHAN IS A $90a-week night maintenance man for a building contractor. Married 13 years, he has a son, 12, and a daughter, 10.

Like most of his former classmates at JHS 139, he saw service during World War II, spending three years in the Navy, He I wouldn't like the Job, sums up the experience: "We "First he tells me. graduated.

And that was that. "No," he says, and the voice is surpris-ingly lacking in bitterness, "I never got a job when it was all over."

But did he really try?

"No," he admits. 'I guess. I didn't, not really. Photography? guess it was some wild idea I once had."

Prodded, he does recall one effort-when he went to answer an employment agency ad for a darkroom technician. It was, he said, a strange experience.

"It was one of those places on 42d St., you know? Well, I talked to this guy there but all he seemed interested in doing was convincing me how much and all about how much I wouldn't like the work. Hell, I saw I wasn't getting anywhere, TROTMAN PAUSES FOR A moment, then leans forward and laughs. Now there is bitterness in the sound. "You know that guy—that same guy—I read in the papers a couple of years ago about how he was arrested. For molesting a policewoman. who'd been sent to the agency after some women complained about this guy. Oh yes, I remembered him. I remembered who he was."

The experience at the employment agency ended his quest.

"I still fool around with the camera," Trotman said. "Nothing serious—you know, pictures of my kids and stuff like that. It's kind of hard without my own darkroom-there isn't room in here for a permanent one. By the time you get set up, you kind of lose your enthusiasm, But this friend and I have been talking about putting together a darkroom some day."

Carefully, he rewraps the old photographs and returns them to their resting place, the closet where you stash dreams. And a visitor, watching, wonders if perhaps Trotman might have been more successful if he had more drive, if he hadn't been more drive. It is discouraged so easily.

Then he recalls the words:

Daddy, daddy, daddy, All I want is you.
You can have me, baby—
but my lovin' days is through.

A certain amount of impotence is a dream deferred.
